LETTER FROM NORMAN HELD AS EVIDENCE AGAINST GIRL

American Authorities Believe Mrs. Pohlman Supplied Clothes.

SHE TELLS STORY

From Hospital Bed She Charges Fugitive Deserted Her

Amos E. Norman, escaped prisoner and letter writer extraordinary, still is at large.

Whether he has made good the promise of his latest letter—published yesterday in THE CHINA PRESS—and has left Shanghai is not known, but it is frankly admitted that he has wholly baffled the American authorities and the police. While certain discrepancies in the statements made in his most recent letter have been pointed out, in the main all that he said has found to be true.

In the mental ward of the Victoria Nursing Home where she is under guard Vera Pohlman, the girl accused of aiding Norman to escape, yesterday told of her plight and voiced the hope that Norman yet would come to her rescue.

In one particular Norman's latest letter may prove unfortunate for him because statements that he made in it are likely to use to defeat the very end he has been seeking and for which daily he has been braving recapture, and this in the release of the girl Vera Pohlman, who is being held as an accessory. Several of the things that Norman wrote about his escape are being woven into the net of evidence in which the girl is held.

It was about 7 o'clock on the night of September 7 that Norman and Henry Muncie, who had just been arrested that day and like Norman was being held as a deserter from the 15th U. S. Infantry, made their escape. Earlier in the day Norman had been visited in the jail by Vera Pohlman. The two men overpowered Jailer G. J. Engberg by throwing ammonia into his face and when he was choking from the fumes of the ammonia and still making an effort to halt the fugitives they attacked him by beating him about the head with a revolver, using the weapon also to hold at bay another prisoner who was in the jail.

MYSTERY OF CLOTHES

What the authorities hold to be a particularly significant line in the latest letter to THE CHINA PRESS, deals with what happened after the two had fled from the jail building.

"Now if the Authorities," runs the letter, "will look in the right hand pocket of the blue serge suit Muncie was wearing when he was caught you will find that pocket sewed up with white thread as it was all I could get on nite I broke jail and left the suit with Muncie, as I left him as a woman in woman's clothes—made a pretty good looking woman too."

The last clause of this particular paragraph of the letter has been turned against Vera Pohlman. Where did Norman get the woman's clothes? And in answering this the authorities have fixed the blame on the girl.

Since he was recaptured Muncie has been completely reticent about what happened after he and Norman left the jail building on the night of Sept. 7. When he was retaken he was wearing clothes different from those he wore in the jail. His one statement on this point was that he and Norman had gone to a Russian boarding house and there had obtained other garments. The whereabouts of this boarding house he has been unable or unwilling to give.

INCRIMINATES GIRL

It emphasised that enough is known of Norman's activities before he was arrested to be sure that he was not in possession of a woman's clothing and it is argued that in the weeks he was in the jail he could not have arranged with anyone but Vera Pohlman to have a woman's dress in readiness for him when he got away.

Taken with the fact that so many of Norman's statements have been found to be wholly true there is some disposition now to accept also what he has written about the revolver that was used when the escape was made. What actual evidence the prosecution may have indicating

QUERY, WHICH IS FIRST, PACIFIC OR ARMS QUESTION

(Reuter's Service)

London, Sept. 22.—Reuter's Agency understands that inquiries are now being made in Washington as to whether it is the view of the United States Government, as was originally thought, that the Pacific Conference will precede the Disarmament Conference, or whether, as appears to be suggested, disarmament will come first.

This is regarded as a matter that must be cleared up before arrangements as to procedure are made as it is obvious that the questions of disarmament and the Far East are necessarily dependent on agreement as regards policy, particularly with regard to naval and military matters.

URGES ALL TO UNITE
(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Sept. 19.—General Kou Ping-chun, Tuchun of Yunnan, has sent a circular telegram to the provinces urging the necessity for the North and the South to unite in sending a delegation to Washington.

Mr. Feng Kung-kuang, as representative of the Chinese Banking Group, in a recent interview with the Waichiaopu pointed out the necessity for a representative of the group to be attached to the Chinese delegation.

No banking delegate has yet been chosen but a conference will be held at Tientsin tomorrow to discuss this matter.

RUSSIA TO BE DEFENDED

Vladivostok, Sept. 22.—The American Consulate publishes an official statement to the effect that, while not represented at the Washington Conference, Russian legal interests will be defended there.

An organisation of compradores throughout China, "to help maintain China's rights at the Pacific Conference," is urged by the Tientsin compradore of Anderson, Meyer and Company, according to the Chinese press.

International Bank Pays Big Dividend

The Shanghai Branch of the International Banking Corporation has been advised by its head office, New York, that a semi-annual dividend at the rate of 24 percent per annum has been declared payable September 30, 1921.

Undivided profits of the Corporation have been increased by $214,000 U. S. Currency to a total of $4,229,000.00 U. S. Currency.

"Wish Father Were Here To See And To Rejoice In Dedication Of College"

John D. Rockefeller Jr. Tells How Oil Magnate Philanthropist Decided To Aid China By Creation Of Great Medical College

J. D. Rockefeller Jr. To Speak Here

JOHN D. Rockefeller, Jr., will deliver an address at the Chinese Young Men's Christion Association here next Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock. He is expected in Shanghai early in the week.

By John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

Note: Following is the full text of the lofty and inspiring address delivered By John D. Rockefeller, Jr., at the dedication of the Peking Union Medical College:

OLIVER Wandell Holmes says in his "Autocrat of the Breakfast Table" that every individual is a combination of three persons: first, what he thinks he is; second, what his friends think he is; third, what he really is.

I am here today representing not three, but four personalities. First of all, I have come to China representing my father, who established the Rockefeller Foundation. I am here, secondly, as a representative of the Foundation itself, not inappropriately called my father's child. Thirdly, I represent the China Medical Board, the child of the Foundation, hence the grandchild of my father. And lastly, I am here as a trustee of the reorganised Peking Union Medical College, the adopted child of the China Medical Board, hence my father's great grand-child.

It is fortunate for this assembly that I am not particularly interested in genealogy, for otherwise I might insist on your climbing with me through the numerous branches of this family tree.

Speaking first, for my father, and as his representative, may I say how much I wish he were with us that he might himself see and rejoice in what is here being accomplished, and that you might feel the inspiration of his simplicity and greatness of character. But since that cannot be I am happy to be able to read you a cable message which has just been received from him:

"My highest hopes are centered on the Peking Union Medical College which is about to open its doors. May all who enter, whether faculty or students, be fired with the spirit of service and of sacrifice and may the institution become an ever-widening influence for the promotion of the physical, mental and spiritual well-being of the Chinese Nation."

On behalf of the China Medical Board, Mr. Greene, the Resident Director, has already spoken. Therefore, in the few moments at my disposal, as a representative of the Rockefeller Foundation, the grand-parent of the baby, an adult infant to be sure, whose rechristening we are here today to celebrate, I shall devote myself chiefly to the youngest offspring of this family tree, the Peking Union Medical College, of whose origin, prenatal history, birth and early development I desire to speak briefly.

Father's Attention Turned Upon China

As my father's interest in human betterment widened, and it came within his power to render service to his fellowmen beyond the boundaries of his own country, his attention was naturally directed to the great Chinese Nation, with its history running back thousands of years; its early achievements in industry; its literature and art, so rich and beautiful; and its population, greater than that of any other nation on earth.

Feeling that perhaps by seeking to assist in the establishment of high educational standards the greatest service could be rendered to the Chinese people, my father made possible the sending of a commission from the University of Chicago, in the year 1909, to study the educational conditions of China. The commission, composed of Dr. Ernest D. Barton, Professor of Theory and Dr. Thomas C. Chamberlin, Professor of Geology, after a thorough study, recommended the establishment at Peking of an educational institution for the teaching of the natural sciences.

However, so gigantic seemed the undertaking and so important the avoidance of a false step, that further study and conference were deemed desirable before any move was made. This led to the conclusion that to focus thought and effort on one group of sciences, namely, the medical sciences and their application, was the wiser course to follow. A second commission was therefore sent to China in 1914, consisting of Dr. Harry Pratt Judson, President of the University of Chicago, Dr. F. G. Peabody, of the Medical Faculty of Harvard University, and Mr. Roger S. Greene, at that time Consul General of the United States at Hankow, now Resident Director in China of the China Medical Board. This group was requested to study the medical needs of China and the opportunities for co-operation in meeting them. The commission returned convinced of the wisdom of the conclusion already reached and recommending the establishment of a medical school and hospital at Peking and a similar medical center in Shanghai. Before final action was taken, however, a third commission went out in 1915, composed of Dr. William H. Welch, of the Johns Hopkins University Medical School, Dr. Simon Flexnor of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, Dr. Wallace Buttrick, President of the General Education Board, and Dr. Fred Gates, also of the Rockefeller Institute. The report of this commission corroborated the findings of its predecessor and cordially endorsed the program of establishing the two medical centers previously recommended. Going further, it advised entering into an alliance with the Peking Union Medical College, which had been in operation for several years, and building upon that foundation the medical school proposed for Peking.

Objects Attained By Peking School

Let me pause just here to say that in the light of subsequent events and experience it became clear that the main objects sought could be attained by the development of a medical school in Peking alone.

In the meantime, the Rockefeller Foundation had established the China Medical Board as a subsidiary organisation to deal with medical and health questions in China. The China Medical Board therefore entered into a contract for the purchase of the land and buildings of the Peking Union Medical College and the reorganisation of its board of trustees. The new board was to consist of thirteen members, each of the organisations which had been associated together in the founding and development of the college to have one representative, namely,

The Medical Missionary Association of London,

The Society for the Propagation of the Gospel,

The London Missionary Society,

The Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America,

The Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church,

The American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, the seven remaining trustees to represent the China Medical Board. The contract also contained an agreement on the part of the China Medical Board to build the necessary additional buildings and provide such main-

GUNBOAT IS ORDERED OFF FROM MACAO AND DEPARTS

Told To Go At Six But Harbor Is Clear By 4 O'Clock

SHANGHAI READY

Big Force Assured, But Need May Not Arise Is Consul's Wire

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Hongkong, Sept. 23.—There was much excitement at Macao yesterday when a Chinese gunboat anchored in the inner harbor. The Portuguese authorities sent an ultimatum, ordering the gunboat to leave before six o'clock the same evening. The gunboat left at four o'clock, and quiet was restored.

Ready for war with China in the Portuguese Possession of Macao, Shanghai Portuguese numbering up to 250 fighting men were waiting definite advice yesterday from their Shanghai Consul-General Mr. A. Casanova, who is now in the south, that they were needed to fight for their territorial rights in the south.

It is believed, however, on latest advice that the tenseness of the situation in Macao has been somewhat relieved by the developments of the last two days. Telegrams from the south convey the information that the aggressive Chinese authorities, which began the difficulty by firing upon Portuguese river police have backed off into the background. The Portuguese forces are reported now as merely "standing by."

Investigation into the situation at Macao discloses that a serious clash occurred on the 16th between sailors from the Macao water police and a number of soldiers from the Chinese garrison. The Macao water police approached the junk and ordered the soldiers to submit to search. When the soldiers refused, the Macao boats opened fire. Some state the intention of the Macao water police was merely to frighten the soldiers into submission and the guns were fired purposely over the heads of the soldiers. However, the soldiers returned the fire. An hour afterwards four wounded sailors landed from the police boats.

For some time there has been friction between the Portuguese and the Chinese in Macao. The Macao Government, the Chinese say, desires to extend its authority over Wan Tsai and Ngan Hang while the Chinese authorities are equally determined to oppose this. Several incidents have cropped up during the past few months. Some Chinese soldiers were arrested and disarmed but on protest from the Canton Government, they were released and their arms returned to them with a suitable apology.

Again, some fishing boats whose owners were scraping their boats on the Chinese side of the River, were seized by the water police for not having obtained permission of the Macao harbor master, and not having licenses from Macao. The owners were forced to take out licenses and were fined. Again, upon protest from the Agent of the Canton Government at Chinshan, the money was returned.

In this case, which was a clear violation of the agreement entered into last year between the Provincial Government of Kwang-Macao, the Secretary of Macao denied that any orders had been given by a responsible authority but subsequently it was admitted that the assistant harbor master ordered the arrest. A few days ago, a Chinese river gunboat was refused anchorage in the river although the above mentioned agreement provides for the free entrance of any Chinese Government gunboat or steamer. The situation is regarded as having reached a crisis. Developments of the next few hours will decide between peace and war.

China Adds The Finishing Touch To Woman's Glory

By Elsie McCormick

THOUGH moralists and petticoat manufacturers rant with equal fervor about the paucity of modern feminine attire, there is at least one respect in which women are more fully clad than they were twenty years ago. Vertebrae have ceased to be retiring and shoulder-blades are an open book, but women have tried to score one against Eve by adding a bit of covering where it didn't used to be. They are all wearing hairnets.

Practically the only hairnets known a generation ago were the thick black variety that held the waterfall in place—the kind that are still seen occasionally in the Salvation Army. Today the average girl would be as likely to stroll down town without her hairnet as without her shoes and considerably less likely than without her stockings. Give a girl a chance to put on a hairnet and she feels dressed, regardless of whether there is a smudge of grime on her cheek or a run in her hosiery.

Without a hairnet she feels dishevelled, even if her gown is a creation of the Callot Sisters and her complection of the National Academy. When a girl wishes to be fetching, she puts on two, and when she wishes to be very, very fetching, she wears three. Incidentally it might be remarked that modern fishers of men use hairnets to make their catches.

WELL TRAVELED NET

But the girl who slips on her third hairnet just as the bell rings and then lets him wait for half an hour while she adjusts the side and front hair with invisibles seldom stops to think that the little net has traveled some 32,000 miles on its way to her boudoir. Considering the young man downstairs who is trying to interest himself in Pope's translation of the Iliad found on the center-table, it's just as well that she doesn't. If he happened to know the statistics, he would be likely to conclude that the net walked all the way and that she waited for it.

One of the most amazing commercial developments of China in recent years has been the sudden rise of a gigantic hairnet industry that has already spread itself over the world. In 1915, the number of hairnets shipped from China was almost too negligible to be counted. The estimate for this year, according to Mr. A. Glemby, is 2,000,000 gross of hairnets to the United States alone, without reference to the large importations to London and Paris.

GOES ON LONG JOYRIDE

The joyriding of the much-traveled hairnet begins in China where Chinese ladies needing money for a new skirt or something sell their raven locks to agents and go home looking as if a freight train had run perilously close to their heads. After being collected in Hongkong or some other center, the hair travels to New York, London

RIFLE FIRE CLOSES THE YANGTZE TO STEAMERS

Northern Troops Try To Enfold Szechuen Now 12 Miles Off Ichang

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Hankow, Sept. 22.—A wireless message from Ichang yesterday stated that the steamship Anning, in accordance with an experiment proceeded a mile above Ichang where she was fired on.

Three hundred shots were purposely fired at the vessel and twenty hits recorded. The ship returned to anchorage after having gone two miles above Ichang.

It seems likely that the Szechuenese intend to stop all river-traffic no matter under what flag the vessels are running.

The Northern troops are coming out in an enveloping movement about 12 miles east of Ichang.

It is reported that General Liu Hsiang demands the policing and garrisoning of Shasi and Ichang, and also the control of West Hupeh and the Salt Administration.

It is being considered whether attempts should be made to communicate with the Szechuanese on the right bank. The Chihli peace party and the British and Japanese Consuls may cross the river on board H. M. S. Scarab and try to arrange a stoppage of firing.

It is not intended to return fire, however, should they be attacked. If a landing is denied, the Scarab will return.

The Northerners' forces are estimated at 10,000; there is also a column of unknown strength coming from Shasi.

MESSAGE OF POPE POINTS OUT GRAVITY OF SITUATION

Russian Famine Growing More and More Serious

MUST END WAR

Turk-Greek Hostilities Great Menace For Armenians

(French Wireless through Reuter)

Geneva, Sept. 22.—The Assembly of the League of Nations yesterday began discussion of the reports of the various committees.

The President of the Assembly, Jhr. van Karnebeek, read to the Assembly the following from Pope Benedict:

"The news arriving from Russia is getting more and more serious. Only the combined efforts of the peoples and governments can relieve such great misery. We therefore address to the President of the League of Nations Assembly and the representatives of all the States present a very warm appeal to their sentiments of humanity and fraternity for prompt and efficacious measures to be taken in favor of the unfortunate Russian people.

"(Signed) Benedict XV."

On the proposal of the President this communication was referred to the Sixth Commission.

The President then announced that all the judges elected to the Permanent Court of International Justice had accepted their nomination and that this court was now ready to begin work.

At the request of Signor Scialoja, Italy, the Secretariat promised to do its utmost to enable the Court to begin its sittings as soon as possible.

DISCUSS ARMENIA

The Armenian question was then discussed.

Lord Robert Cecil declared that the League should intervene in order to arrive at a settlement of the Armenian question, at the same time taking care to avoid giving Armenia false hopes.

The Persian delegate declared that the present situation in Armenia was due to the war between the Greeks and Turks, as the Turks considered the Armenians a serious menace to the safety of their army. He expressed the opinion that it would be impossible to do anything for Armenia as long as the Graeco-Turkish war continued.

M. Seferiades, Greece, drew the attention of the Assembly to the terrible massacre of the Armenian population.

FIGHT AGAINST TYPHUS

Dr. Nansen, Norway, then read to the Assembly a report on the repatriation of war prisoners and announced that 380,000 men had already been sent back to their homes. Jhr. van Karnebeek, in the name of the Assembly, congratulated Dr. Nansen on the splendid results obtained.

The third item on the agenda was the presentation of a report by M. Ador, Switzerland, on the fight against typhus in Poland. M. Ador pointed out the necessity of continuing the work undertaken in view of the danger of contagious diseases coming from Russia and vigorously appealed to the Governments to pay the amounts they had promised or to give new contributions.

The Assembly then passed a resolution, approving the work done by the Epidemic Commission in conjunction with the Polish Government, and recommending that the work of the Commission should be continued and extended to other countries when the Council of the League considered such action advisable.

(Reuter's Service)

Geneva, Sept. 22.—The Fifth Commission of the League of Nations has adopted Jhr. de Marees van Swinderen's, Holland, report regarding opium and also the proposal of the Norwegian, M. Bonnevie, providing that the States interested in the opium trade or the cultivation of the poppy, particularly Germany, should be invited to collaborate on the Opium Consultative Committee.

REWORD BLOCKADE CLAUSE
(Reuter's Service)

Geneva, Sept. 22.—The third commission of the League of Nations, dealing with disarmament and blockade, has adopted a fresh wording of Article 16 of the League Covenant concerning the use of the economic weapon.

The new text provides that the Council of the League may authorise the postponement of the application of blockade by certain members of the League if such a measure offers a better prospect of attainment of the end in view, or tends to reduce the losses and inconveniences which members might suffer from the application of the economic weapon.

CONTROL ARMS TRAFFIC

Geneva, Sept. 22.—The temporary mixed commission of the League of Nations on armaments, in a report to the Assembly of the League with regard to its work, emphasises the point that none of the problems confronting the League is more difficult than that of disarmament, in which connection the effective regulation of international traffic in arms is vitally and urgently important.

The report points out that the International Convention for the Control of Trade in Arms which was signed by the Allies at St. Germain on September 10, 1919, had not yet been ratified by the majority of the signatories.

Great Britain, France and Japan were ready to ratify the convention as soon as all the other principal Powers were prepared to do so, and Italy was willing to ratify it as soon as her Parliament had approved the Convention.

With regard to the United States, which, in view of the magnitude of her production in arms and munitions, is capitally important, the convention had not yet been submitted to the Senate for ratification.

If the American traffic in arms were not controlled, the convention would be likely to remain inoperative, the report concludes.

ALBANIA ALSO PROBLEM

Geneva, Sept. 22.—The Council of the League of Nations has decided to submit the Albanian problem to the Council of Ambassadors.

MORALITY TO BE CONTRACT CLAUSE FOR MOVIE WORK

(Reuter's Service)

New York, Sept. 22.—As an outcome of the Arbuckle case, a large cinema company's attorney announces that a "morality clause," pledging actors and actresses to "conduct themselves with due regard to public convention," will be immediately inserted in all the company's contracts, the violation of which will mean forfeiture of the delinquent's position.

Unemployment Put Up To Ll. George

(Reuter's Service)

London, Sept. 22.—The Prime Minister met the mayors of London boroughs today. The latter, who had specially journeyed to Gairloch, complained of the inadequacy of previous measures for dealing with unemployment, and submitted important schemes for coping with the problem.

Mr. Lloyd George declared that he had summoned the Cabinet Ministers from London to explore means for alleviating the distress. He explained the impossibility of the Government shouldering the whole burden, and foreshadowed legislation ensuring co-operation between the Government and local authorities and manufacturers, traders, bankers and organised labor.

MOTOR CAR MEN ORGANISE; WILL FIGHT TAX PLAN

Committee Named To Lead Opposition To S.M.C. Licence Regulations

Shanghai automobile men are to have a trade organisation. First steps toward its formation were taken at a general meeting at the Central Garage yesterday afternoon, and it is hoped soon to have all the garage men in the city enrolled. Yesterday's meeting was called for a double purpose, first, to plan a trade organisation, and second, to voice a protest against the licencing regulations recently promulgated by the Shanghai Municipal Council.

Ever since the new regulations were announced by the Council the motor car men have felt that they were unduly restrictive, and that, if enforced to the letter, they would result in great injury to the industry. The new rules, the motor car men think, were drawn without proper consideration for the members of the trade, and if allowed to stand without protest they feel that these regulations would cause great hardship.

A special committee of six was appointed to take up the new licencing regulations in detail, and to formulate a plan for approaching the Municipal Council, and also the French Council, with a view to having them modified. The special committee is composed of Messrs. J. J. Keegan (Chairman of the previous Organisation Committee), Leon Friedman (China Motors, Ltd.), H. S. Honigsberg (H. S. Honigsberg and Co., Inc.), F. W. Schlobohm (Shanghai Service Co.), S. J. Grace (Wah Chang Trading Corporation) and Ph. Osterberger (Grand Garage Francais). Arthur West, manager of the Shanghai Automobile Show, will act as secretary of the committee pending organisation of the traders into a permanent association.

WILL MEET MONDAY

The special committee will meet at the Central Garage Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock to decide upon a procedure. A set of alternative regulations will be drawn, for submission to the Council as representing the views of the motor car men. Speakers at the meeting made it plain that the motor car men as a body are not opposed to licencing regulations, but do object to licencing rules which give city employes the power of life or death over them, as they assert is the case under the new regulations. The meeting yesterday was the first of several that will be held in the near future, looking to the organisation of a trade body here similar to those in cities of Europe and America. At present the trade is afflicted with numerous abuses which only organised effort can correct, and all the dealers are eager to get a strong association started. The manner in which the traders have "pulled together" on the automobile show, now an assured success, has shown them the practicability of working together for the accomplishment of problems which affect all of them alike.

Those present at yesterday's meeting were: C. J. White, Central Garage; R. T. Ryton, The Auto Palace; J. K. Gold, Ford Hire Car Service; Leon Friedman, China Motors, Ltd.; Joseph J. Keegan, Chairman of the previous organisation committee; S. J. Grace, Wah Chang Trading Corporation; Phil. Giovaninni, representing H. S. Honigsberg and Co., Inc.; Ph. Osterberger, Grand Garage Francais; F. W. Schlobohm, The Shanghai Service Co.; Zia Yu-tshing, Fei Lung Co.; G. R. Arthur, The Great Northern Garage; M. L. Moody, The Universal Body Co., and Arthur West, manager of the Shanghai Automobile Show.

Cotton Need Of World Estimated By Master Spinners

(Reuter's Service)

London, Sept. 22.—The International Federation of Master Cotton-spinners and Manufacturers Associations estimates the world's consumption of raw cotton for the six months ending July 31, at 7,357,000 bales, of which Great Britain used 730,000 bales, India 904,000 bales, Japan 871,000 bales and the United States 2,540,000 bales. Stocks of raw cotton in the spinners hands throughout the world on August 1 totalled 3,926,000 bales of which Great Britain holds 296,000 bales, India 845,000 bales, Japan 700,000 bales, China 186,000 bales and the United States 1,102,000 bales.

Short time working in Great Britain for six months ending July 31 aggregates nearly 13 weeks and in Japan 21¼ weeks.

There are 152,000,000 spinning spindles throughout the world of which 56,000,000 are in operation in Great Britain.

LISBON PEOPLE DROWNED IN OWN HOUSES BY RAIN

(Reuter's Service)

Lisbon, Sept. 22.—A thunderstorm and torrential rains on Tuesday night and yesterday caused enormous damage to the city and heavy loss of life. Hundreds of people have been injured.

The streets are transformed into torrents and numerous buildings flooded. Many persons were drowned in their houses and some were swept into the sewers. A wall fell on a crowded tramcar, killing seven and injuring many.

U.S. MERCHANTS TO SEND EXHIBITION SHIP OVERSEAS

(Reuter's Service)

New York, Sept. 2 (by mail).—The American steamer St. Louis, fitted out as a floating exhibition hall with samples of the products of 300 leading American firms, will leave New York next January on a trip to 50 foreign ports, in the interests of American sales promotion. The trip will take a year. The space available for exhibition is equal to that of Madison Square Garden.

The promoter, Mr. J. Herbert Anderson, says it should be remembered that business conditions in some parts of South America are good, and will be improved in 1922. Japan, China, India, Australia, Norway and Sweden have been free from much of the financial worry that followed the world war, he says, and the Balkan States should be a fertile field for the exchange of commodities. All those countries will be included in the itinerary of the St. Louis.

It is claimed that many of the smaller countries have considerable buying power, and that the American manufacturers will lose ground in those fields in competition with European firms unless they get busy. Interpreters and credit men will be carried on the trip to assist the manufacturers' representatives in presenting their goods to foreign buyers and establishing sound financial relations. The St. Louis is at present being converted into an oil burner.

Liners Cut Rates On Freight To East

or Paris, where it is treated to a soap and water bath, followed by a baptism in peroxide and ammonia. If it is to be used for switches or transformation, it undergoes a literal acid test composed of much stronger ingredients; if it is consecrated to the making of nets, the fumigation ends and the dyeing begins.

The hair is all bleached to a haystack tint and then recolored in about half a dozen standard shades. Even the hair from which black nets are to be made undergoes a preliminary bleaching. Specialists in the trade say that there is a demand for brilliant red nets of a shade unknown outside the henna family, ladies with light brown hair claiming that they bring out the sheen and the golden lights.

Having been properly bathed, bleached and dyed, the hair returns to China. We heard, during the war, of soldiers in France walking twenty miles for a bath, but we never knew of anybody traveling 16,000 miles for one. While we admit that the ratio of soap and water to the population is as small in China as the ratio in America of real movie queens to the number of candidates, it does seem to us that they could accumulate enough to perform the Saturday night rites for a few million hairnets.

SOME PEROXIDE HERE

It might even be possible to import a little peroxide. Anyway, after spending an afternoon in a local hotel lobby, we judge that it is.

The next step of the hairnet expert is to farm the tresses out to a contractor, who sublets them some half dozen times until they finally reach the country villages of northern Shantung. The actual making of the nets which takes place in the homes, occupies everybody from Precious Flower, aged four, to the Honorable Grandfather who has retired from the ruder pursuits of the farm. Made by sewing individual hairs together over a tiny block of wood, the labor entails an eye-strain that would spell total darkness for anybody who had previously weakened his eyes by reading. The marvel is, not that many nets are defective but that any are perfect.

An expert, working fast, can make a net in two hours. Precious Flower and Honorable Grandfather would fail to achieve this record by about sixty minutes. Considering that hairnets retail in the American market for ten cents after everyone else en route has subtracted his profit, one can imagine how many decimal places it would take to express the compensation of the Chinese maker.

FOR THREE DAYS WEAR

From the coolie homes the nets go to central stations at Tsinanfu, Chefoo and Tsingtao for inspection and mending, after which they return to America and Europe. After all this excessive globetrotting, the ultimate consumer wears it for all of three days—if she doesn't happen to tear it as she takes it from the envelope. Incidentally hairnets contract and expand according to the presence or absence of rates. In order to house the current style of hair properly Chinese farmer folk in Shantung are making the nets twice as large as they did last year. Thus Broadway fashions are reflected in interior China by people who probably imagine that hairnets are some strange piece of foreign joss pidgin.

If China could only manage to make a hairnet large enough, perhaps the surface of the earth wouldn't look quite so untidy as it does at present.

Letter From Norman Held As Evidence

that Vera Pohlman furnished the weapon to Norman has not been discussed.

Norman's statement that he usually carried a revolver, and on one occasion at the address that he gave used it to seize a quantity of cocaine from a man whose name also is given, are assertions that have been verified. He tells also of having been shot on one occasion, describing how this came about.

A question has been raised about this incident. It is known that Norman did receive a bullet wound months ago and was under treatment for it at the Shanghai General Hospital, but it is recalled and is a part of public records that when he was called upon to tell how he received the wound he said that it was an accident that had happened while he was cleaning the weapon.

What little is known of Norman's career in the Far East dates from the time of his enlistment on December 10, 1919, at the Cuartel d'Espana in Manila. According to Army records his home then was at Newfield, New Jersey where, it is said, he has a sister living, a Miss Henrietta Norman. He was born at Riverhead, Long Island and is thought to be about 30 years of age.

While he was with the 15th Infantry at Tientsin he was attached to the Motor Transportation Division of the Quartermaster's Corps. He was posted as a deserter on October 29, 1920 and it was about that time that he came to Shanghai.

Norman's complete indifference to danger was well illustrated at that time, for he did not trouble to assume another name and what is regarded as one of the most astonishing of his exploits was his entry into the Customs Service in which he served as a tide waiter on probation for a short time. He obtained this position without papers of identification of any kind, so far as is known and no less bold was his next move in becoming a member of the Customs Company of the Shanghai Volunteer Corps. His uniform, helmet and rifle were subsequently found at the boarding house where he lived.

Norman left the Customs voluntarily and rather mysteriously early in May of this year. On May 4 the Commissioner of Customs addressed a notice to Mr. E. S. Cunningham, American Consul-General, telling him that Tide Waiter Norman had disappeared.

Four weeks later Norman was recognised at the Olympic Games by an officer of the 15th U. S. Infantry and his arrest followed. His later exploits—his first escape from two soldiers and his subsequent arrest followed by the prison break of three weeks ago—all are familiar to the public.

Vera Pohlman, In Hospital, Says Norman Deserted Her

Lying weak and faint in her narrow bed in a bare little room of the mental ward in the Victoria Nursing Home, Vera Pohlman, once a famous beauty and dancer in Russia and now broken, friendless and a prisoner, yesterday declared her innocence and stated that if Amos Norman really loved her he would save her from a jail sentence by giving himself up to the authorities and clearing her name.

The girl is to be tried Monday afternoon on the charge of being an accessory to Norman's escape from jail.

With her sunken brown eyes filled with tears, her thin fingers nervously braiding and unbraiding her deep black hair, Mrs. Pohlman sobbed that when Norman was in prison she visited him daily and sacrificed everything she had to buy him comforts.

"I was good to him but now that I am in trouble and am a prisoner he has deserted me to save himself," she said.

ASSERTS SHE "STUCK"

"I do not know where Norman is hiding," she sobbed in a weak and faltering voice. "I did not help him to escape. I sold my bedding and my best silk dress to buy little things for him. I stuck to him when he needed me and now it is I who must pay. He said that an American girl always stuck to her man when he was in trouble but that he expected a Russian girl would desert him. I am a Russian girl but he knows that I stuck just the same as an American girl."

She lighted another cigarette nervously. Vera Pohlman smokes all the day long. It is her only solace. It helps calm the nerves shattered by constant use of drugs.

Her thin sunken cheeks flushed just a little as she leaned against the pillows and told a story of a life of heights and depths which has culminated in her being held a prisoner in connection with one of the most sensational cases that has come under the jurisdiction of the American Court here.

SHOT BY HUSBAND

"I was trained to become a dancer by my parents in Russia," Mrs. Pohlman began. "When I was quite young I was married and my husband was very jealous. I was admired for I was quite pretty, they told me—so different from now—and everywhere I danced I received favors. I knew success and things went well in those days, I was given presents and money—the people who saw me dance sent me gifts and roubles to the stage.

"One night my husband rushed on the stage just after I had finished dancing. He commanded me to look at him and then he shot me here in the chest. When I recovered I left him."

The sick girl then told a story of further dancing successes which followed one another until the storm of revolution broke, a government fell and the rise of Bolshevism saw her literally pushed across bleak Siberia. She danced where she could, appeared at the sobranies here and there and some way or another made her way to the East.

She subsequently came to Shanghai, danced at one of the local theaters and finally at one of Trench resorts.

STARTED USING DRUGS

"Then my troubles began all over again and I became unhappy—it was hard for me to earn my living and all the girls in the bars suffered much. I began to use cocaine and heroin—because the drugs made me feel happy. Ugh,—she shrank back against the pillows as if from a hideous vision—I wish that I had never seen a drug. All the girls in the bar room used drugs and the habit grew on me. I lost my position, got another and lost that and I sunk lower and lower.

"I was out of work and I tried hard to get work. I tried to get a position as a ladies' maid. I offered even to do amah wash pidgin. No one would have me.

"I met Mr. Norman. My girl friend showed me the easiest way and Mr. Norman did love me. He offered me a home and I went with him. I am sure that he loved me very much at one time for I have known him to get on his knees to kiss the floor where I had walked. We quarrelled often, though, and I decided to leave him for he was harsh to me sometimes.

"Once after a bitter quarrel my fingers were cut by a bottle and I packed my things to go. He cried and cried bitterly and begged me to stay and give him another chance. The Chinese boy came to me and kowtowed and pleaded with me to 'give master one more chance,' and I stayed.

KNEW NORMAN DESERTED

"But we had no money and had a hard time. I knew Mr. Norman was a deserter from the army for he had told me this was the reason he could not find employment. He is a good mechanic and can do many kinds of work but everywhere he sought employment he was asked about his nationality and his papers and he dared not go to the Consulate for fear of being arrested."

Again Vera Pohlman, now visibly tired by the telling of her tragic story, lighted another cigarette. She began smoking it as she did the others—hungrily, for it is a hard fight she is making against the drug habit and since she has been a prisoner doctors have denied her drugs in any form. She went on:

"Then Mr. Norman began smuggling and I begged him not to—but it was the last resort. He was arrested but escaped by jumping from a window and then he was arrested again."

Mrs. Pohlman told of visiting Norman in the American jail and of selling her clothing to buy comforts for him, of bringing a twenty-cent bottle of ammonia to him one day when he complained of a bad headache.

The day before Norman, with Muncie, made their sensational escape from prison, the two men were dancing about the jail, Mrs. Pohlman said.

"How can you dance and be so happy when you are in jail," she asked them. "Now I understand," she said yesterday, "perhaps they had made plans to escape but I did not know—I swear I did not know. I did not take a dress to him. The jailers saw everything I brought to him and they know that I could bring nothing in a package of cigarettes."

The reporter told Mrs. Pohlman of Norman's letter to THE CHINA PRESS in which he said he was dressed as a woman. "I did not give him the clothes," she almost cried, "and its awful hard for me to make the authorities believe that I am innocent—oh, I want to get away from it all—I never want to see Mr. Norman again—he has left me to suffer when he thinks only of himself—he leaves me in jail while he is free."

Suddenly she began to laugh hysterically, this girl of moods and passions whose one object in life is to free herself of the charge she asserts has been unjustly placed upon her—"That Mr. Norman swore so often that he loved me so much," she said brokenly, "but he leaves me here to suffer while he goes free—thinking only of writing letters for me."

Notable Physicians Of Orient Attend Opening Of Union Medical College

Peking, Sept. 19.—One of the most notable group of men and women who have ever gathered in the Orient, were assembled this afternoon in the auditorium of the Peking Union Medical College for the dedication of the new buildings and reorganised school. Beside representatives from nearly every leading educational and medical schools in China and a large number of doctors from the missionary and private hospitals in China, there were many celebrated men and women from the Philippines, Batavia, Japan, France, England and America.

The Chinese Government was represented by the Ministers of Foreign Affairs, Interior and Education and by the Director of the Central Hospital in Peking.

Two hundred men and women formed the academic procession which marched into the auditorium at four o'clock. Mr. Earnest Hall presided at the pipe organ, Dr. George E. Vincent, President of the Rockefeller Foundation, formally stated that the buildings had been erected by the Foundation which would continue to hold title to the property. They now formally turned them over to the Peking Union Medical College of which Dr. Henry S. Houghton is Director, who would now assume control.

Dr. Houghton in his address of welcome spoke of the labor of the group of medical missionaries who had built up the former organisation. He said that the primary function of the institution is to teach. He trusted that the group of men now in the new institution would be as full of zeal in their imparting a knowledge of the art of healing to the Chinese as had been the former group.

His Excellency, W. W. Yen, Minister of Foreign Affairs, in his greetings, said that only once in a lifetime did there come the privilege of taking part in such a great occasion as the dedication of this great medical school. The establishment of this institution was an illustration of how the West makes the application of science to every human activity as the greatest work in life. "Love of service" is the motto back of such ministry.

Chi Yao-shang, Minister of the Interior, Ma Lin-yi, Minister of Education and Dr. Chen (S. P.), Medical Director of the Government Central Hospital, spoke in a similar strain. They gave welcome to the new institution in no uncertain manner.

Roger S. Greene, Resident Director of the Board, emphasised the desire of the Board that the missionary character of the old college should be continued in the new. He dwelt upon the international character of the institution as shown in the personnel of the faculty. Europe and America were well represented and a number of the Chinese members have already begun to distinguish themselves by the high standards they were setting. So many problems are world problems. Diseases know no national boundaries. Nations in the world war realised the necessity of world co-operation. In famine it has likewise been necessary. The Red Cross has now effected an international organisation for the attacking of some of these world menaces. So this College must continue to be international in its work. It should especially render a service in the bringing about of better understanding between the Chinese and other nations.

The great address of the day was given by John D. Rockefeller, Jr. which appears in full above.

PERSHING GIVEN LONG TALK WITH FRENCH MINISTER

(French Wireless through Reuter)

Paris, September 22.—General Pershing arrived in Paris last evening. This morning he visited M. Barthou, the Minister of War, with whom he had a long conversation.

Tomorrow afternoon General Pershing will have an audience with President Millerand at the Elysee.

"The mission which the great American soldier is going to fulfil in France", writes the Temps, "should touch the heart of all good citizens, because it consists of paying a tribute to the unknown soldier whose body reposes beneath the Arc de Triomphe and also to the heroism and spirit of sacrifice of the nation.

"The epic has come to an end, but on both sides of the Atlantic hearts have not changed, but have become more closely bound to the sentiments which the war brought to life."

850 Dead, 2500 Hurt Is Partial Toll Of Victims

(Reuter's Service)

Mayence, September 22.—Eight hundred and fifty bodies have been recovered from the ruins at Oppau. The total of injured persons exceeds the first estimates: already 2,500 have been treated.

The explosion appears to have been caused by a course of tests of the compression of a new gas, the properties of which were imperfectly known.

Rescue parties, including French soldiers, are still searching the ruins for bodies, but it is impossible yet to estimate the number of dead owing to the change of shifts which was taking place at the time of the explosion. There were some 3,000 men on the spot at the time. Most of those inside the works were killed.

Oppau, which contained 6,000 inhabitants, is now the scene of utter desolation. Two French soldiers engaged in rescue work have been seriously injured.

General Degoutte has ordered all the available medical personnel of the French Army on the Rhine to proceed to the scene of the disaster, and he has also arranged for soup to be distributed to the families of the victims. The French High Commissioner has distributed 75,000 marks to local trade unions.

French and German soldiers are very closely collaborating in the rescue work. The German authorities have begged General Degoutte to transmit to the French Government their gratitude for the prompt and efficacious aid of the French troops.

The damage at Frankenthal and Ludwigshafen is so great that at present it cannot be estimated.

A German hospital train has arrived at Frankfort and a French hospital train at Treves with some of the injured.

A factory at Mannheim has collapsed as a consequence of the Oppau explosion. Three workmen have been killed and 14 injured.

FRENCH GUARDS KILLED

Berlin, Sept. 22.—The explosion at Oppau killed the French soldiers who were guarding the Oppau Works and injured a number of French soldiers who were boating on the Rhine.

The Badische Anilinfabrik assess the damage to the Works at 150,000,000 marks.

Quote Crime As Offset To Meyor

(Reuter's Service)

London, Sept. 23.—Following close upon the libel proceedings recently instituted by the Municipality of Chicago against two Chicago newspapers which criticised the civic administration, the Mayor of New York (Mr. John F. Hylan) has fallen foul of the local press. Annoyed at the criticisms of the action of the New York Police in suppressing demonstrations of unemployed, Mr. Hylan has issued a proclamation exhorting advertisers to withdraw their orders from papers which persist in these criticisms.

The newspapers in question have retaliated by publishing the Mayor's proclamation side by side with statistics of crime showing that there have been 383 unsolved murders in New York City since Mr. Hylan appointed Richard E. Enright as Police Commissioner for the City in January, 1918. (Mr Enright has lately admitted to a Commission of Enquiry that he benefited to the extent of $12,000 from a stock-exchange transaction carried out by a subordinate).

Chita And Japan Locked Over 29 Proposed Points

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Sept. 18.—The Dairen conference between representatives of Japan and the Far Eastern Republic to discuss a trade agreement has done nothing since the 12th instant, when it was officially announced by both parties that it had been agreed to adjourn until instructions had been received from the respective governments regarding the amendments proposed to the 29 points submitted by the Chita Government and to the six points proposed by Japan.

The conference will be resumed within a few days.

The draft agreement proposed by the Chita Government was presented to the conference on the 6th instant by Mr. Petroff, chairman of the Chita delegation.

The 29 articles are divided into three sections. The first section provides for friendly relations between Japan and the Far Eastern Republic, the second deals with financial and economic relations of the two countries and the third refers to various international problems pending between Japan and Chita.

RENOUNCE COMMUNISM

Regarding the Chita draft, Mr. Matsushima, chairman of the Japanese delegation, proposed at the opening session six principles on which Japan would be ready to enter into trade relation with the Far Eastern Republic.

At the sessions on the 10th and the 12th instant the proposed amendments were drawn up, and later referred to the respective Governments.

Among the questions already agreed upon is that the Far Eastern Republic shall renounce communism and base its governmental system on democratic principles, as set forth in its constitution, and that neither of the contracting parties shall allow any action or movement within its territory detrimental to the sovereignty of the other.

One of the most difficult problems facing the conference is the question of the withdrawal of Japanese troops from the Maritime Province.

The Chita representative contends that the Japanese troops should be withdrawn as a preliminary measure to the resumption of trade relations and argues further that it is due to the presence of the Japanese troops that the reactionary elements still hold their own in a corner of Siberia, while the Japanese maintain that in view of recent events in the Maritime Province the Japanese troops should not be withdrawn until the whole situation is controlled, peace and order restored and protection of life and property secured by the Chita Government.

FORECAST AGREEMENT

It is believed, however, that the Dairen conference after all will come to an agreement of some sort, in view of the fact that the Chita Government is anxious to solidify its position by securing an agreement with Japan, while the latter desires to settle the Siberian question before the Pacific Conference opens at Washington.

With regard to the apprehension entertained in Chinese circles that the Dairen conference may consider the status of the Chinese Eastern Railway and other questions affecting Chinese interests, it has been officially stated by both parties that the conference will discuss nothing affecting the interests of a third party.

YOURIN AT DAIREN

In connection with the report recently circulated in Peking that armed guards were stationed in the street outside the conference room, it is a fact that protection is being afforded to the Chita representatives by the local police in view of the fact that a large number of reactionary Russians are now staying in Dairen, but no armed man is allowed into the Yamato Hotel where the Chita delegation is staying and where the conference is being held.

Mr. Yourin is still at Dairen. He handed over to Mr. Petroff on the 3rd instant but is remaining here on the chance of his assistance being required by Mr. Petroff during the discussions. Up to the present he has not decided, whether he will return to Peking in compliance with the wishes of the Chinese or go to Chita to settle various outstanding questions there.

Mission Has No Political Aims

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, Sept. 22.—The composition of the business men's mission to America and Europe is now completed. The delegates number 22, representing every phase of commercial and industrial life in Japan.

In the course of an interview with a representative of the Kokusai News Agency, the secretary of the mission made the statement that the purpose of the mission was distinctly not political but originated in the desire of Japanese business men to confer with American and British business men on matters of mutual concern, and to seek opportunities to acquire a general knowledge of the working of the different business institutions and the methods and spirit now actuating their enterprises as well as to impart freely all desired information as to the possibilities of reasonable expectations arising from the present commercial situation in Japan and the Far East, thereby leading to a clear mutual understanding and to the improvement of business generally.

ALL TONGS UNITE TO DO HONOR TO CHINESE SOLDIER

(Reuter's Service)

New York, August 20.—Chinatown today paid reverent homage to one of its sons, Richard Blue, a private in the 77th Division, who died for America overseas.

Business in this quaint section of New York was suspended for his funeral. Thousands of Orientals stood with bared heads as the casket, draped with the Stars and Stripes, was carried through the narrow, winding streets to the wailing strains of a Chinese funeral dirge, played by native buglers.

Twenty Chinese veterans in uniform acted as pall-bearers. In the sorrowful procession marched hundreds of members of four organisations of which Blue was a member. One delegation represented the Jung Wah Tong, which in other days figured in the dreaded Tong wars.

Rival members of the Hip Sing Tong lined Mott and Pell Streets and bowed their heads as the casket passed on through the Bowery, over Manhattan Bridge, and on to a cemetery in Brooklyn, where the interment took place.

Mrs. Gordon-West's Opinion of "Kirby's Sea-Sick Cure"

Park Lane,
February 4, 1912.

Messrs. COLLINS & ROSS,
154 Bermondsey St., London.

DEAR SIRS,

Until my last voyage to New York I dreaded sea travelling. Hitherto I had been so susceptible to sea-sickness, that I could not leave my bed during the whole of the voyage. Even when travelling by train I have been obliged to lie down.

Before leaving for New York, I was persuaded to take "KIRBY'S SEA-SICK CURE" and was surprised to find that I not only avoided sea-sickness, but was entirely free from nausea of any kind. We had very rough seas during the greater part of the voyage, but I took all my meals in the saloon, and never felt better.

I shall never travel without the cure in future. You should make the remedy widely known, for it will be a boon to thousands.

Yours gratefully,
(Signed) MARY GORDON-WEST.

SHANGHAI PUBLIC SCHOOL BEATS TRINITY CATHEDRAL BY INNINGS AND 139 RUNS

Annual Event Goes To Older Boys; Cumine Scores A Century

Boys of the Shanghai Public School won the annual cricket match over the Holy Trinity Cathedral School yesterday by an innings and 147 runs. The match was played on the Shanghai Cricket Club grounds. Five hundred spectators attended.

The Public won the toss and decided to bat first. The start was not promising and a wicket fell before a run had been scored. Cumine for the Public School gave a fine display, knocking up to 103 runs before being bowled out by Aires. His score included two 6's and fifteen 4's and he gave six chances. Cumine deserves commendation as he is the first player to score a century for the Public in an annual match with the Cathedral School. The fielding, especially that of the Public was delightful to watch.

Those to attain double figures were Mahon 20, Johansson 19, Levis 13, Brockett 17, and Nobiston 14. Hickmott and McCann of the Cathedral obtained double figures in the second innings with 14 and 17 respectively.

At the conclusion of the match Mr. E. P. Graham-Barrow congratulated Cumine on his plucky cricket. He then presented a bat and a ball kindly given by Mr. G. M. Billings, the champion old veteran cricketer. The recipients were Cumine who received the bat for the highest score and Brown who get the ball, Brown, it may be mentioned, took four wickets with four consecutive balls.

Here follows the analysis.

Carpentier Will Fight In December

Paris, August 27.—Georges Carpentier will be called upon to face an opponent in Albert Hall, London, on December 2 for a twenty-round fight, says the sporting newspaper Auto.

The man who will oppose him will be chosen by Major Wilson, the English fight promoter, from four prominent heavy weights: Bob Martin, heavy-weight champion of the American expeditionary forces; Frank Moran, the veteran pugilist; Boy McCormick, the English light heavy weight, and Joe Beckett, whose defeat by Carpentier in December, 1919, provided a sensation for the sporting world.

It is pointed out that if McCormick should be chosen to oppose Carpentier there must be an agreement that the tittle to the light heavy-weight championship must go with the result.

INTERPORT LAWN BOWLS AT H'KONG WAS KEEN MATCH

Press Dispatches Show Game Was One Of Best Played In Crown Colony

(Special Wire to The China Press)

Hongkong, Sept. 23.—Shanghai lawn bowlers won the last three games of their visit defeating the Civil Service 23-12, the Hongkong Police 16-15, and the Cragower rink 17-14.

Details of the big interport event at Hongkong last Saturday when Shanghai was defeated in the last head by a score of 28-22 were available yesterday with the arrival of full press reports of the match.

The score in the 19th head stood at 27 to 21 in favor of the locals. Shanghai reduced this by one at the 20th leaving them with five to draw or six to win at the last head. They started off in real earnest, both Marks and Landers putting in counters. When the skips went back Shanghai were lying a certain four with a possible measure for five. Shaw attempted a block with his first wood and Ferguson went in for "rocking." Shaw's second was a short one. The excitement was intense when the home skip came up with his last ball. Shanghai were lying in a favorable position for five and everything depended upon this wood. Ferguson decided on a draw and with calculating aim and admirable precision sent the ball on its journey down the green. A burst of cheering broke out when the skipper's wood displaced his opponents' nearest ball to the jack and won the head and the game.

COMMENTS ON THE GAME

As an exhibition of bowls, the match was disappointing. Better games can be seen on any club green in the Colony any week-end. We can almost be excused for confessing that up to the tea interval we thought we were watching a cricket match. After tea, the quality of the play improved greatly, but it was still far from being up to interport class. The play was generally ragged. Several of the players obviously appeared to be badly suffering from nerves. The "occasion" was too much for them.

The only player who enhanced his reputation was the Shanghai skip. Shaw played a sterling game throughout and made very few mistakes. Some of his drawing shots were real beauties and his free and easy delivery was a treat to watch. The veteran McAlister was sadly off color. He is a skilful player but the gods were against him He did a very useful piece of work, however, at the first end after the tea interval. Hongkong were lying four. McAlister got in a beautiful "ride," displacing the jack and following through with his wood which jumped the ditch and fell into the nullah. Landers, who describes himself as a "griffin" at bowls, was a very useful player and was responsible for some fine drawing. He held up his end very well against Gerrard, his opponent, who had the great advantage of being familiar with the green. Marks played a steady game but was hardly as good as No. 2.

SHAW BOWLED WELL

It is a little difficult to select Hongkong's "star" performer. Hamilton, at No. 3, and Gerrard, at No. 2, were both good, but we are inclined to award the honors to the Taikoo man. His bowling was always good and planning out never at fault. In the important position of No. 3 he was the right man in the right place. Gerrard struck a bad patch for a few heads shortly before the tea interval but otherwise his drawing was consistently accurate. Ferguson was certainly overshadowed by Shaw. On the whole he gave a good account of himself, but it is very hard to find an excuse for his indifferent play when Shanghai obtained a six. Incidentally, we believe this is the first six the Scot has ever had registered against him. He made up for it, however, with the last wood of the game—a difficult shot but perfectly placed—and retired the hero of the match. Clark did not impress. At times he got in some beautiful shots but seemed to be troubled on his back hand, the woods often going clean through.

Hongkong's success can chiefly be attributed to the measure of superiority of their No. 3 over his opponent. With a less reliable player than Hamilton in this important position Shanghai would have stood a good chance of victory. Nevertheless, we hartly congratulate all the members of the team upon their win. The teams have arranged another match and it is quite possible that Shanghai will succeed in reversing Saturday's decision. They have a thoroughly workmanlike side and the players can be depended on to give a good account of themselves.

1ST DAY'S PLAY GIVES SHANGHAI EDGE AT H'KOW

End First Innings With 122 Runs To Hankow's 69; Prospects Good

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Hankow, Sept. 22.—The following are the scores for the first day in the Interport cricket match between Hankow and Shanghai:

Hankow, first innings, 69.

Shanghai, first innings, 122.

At close of play, Hankow had made 20 runs for two wickets.

Shanghai started well against Hankow in the first day's play on Thursday of the 1921 interport match, Allison and Leach bowling for Shanghai took nine wickets for but 44 runs. Allison's speedy trundling accounted for five Hankow batsmen for 23 runs, while Leach's tricky balls allowed but 21 for four wickets. Only two Hankow batsmen ran into double figures: Lowe for 25, and Boulton for 12.

Shanghai's 122 runs were gotten chiefly by Pearson with 25, Clifford 24 and Leslie 21. The best bowling for the opposition was by Bailey with four wickets for 41 runs, and Pearson with three for nine.

The two interport teams had the following players:

SHANGHAI	HANKOW
Clifford	H. G. Bailey
Allison	W. C. Bailey
Leslie	W. C. Broberg
Robertson	Boulton
Simpson	Lowe
McMeekin	Lester
Langley	Mancell
Barnes	Pearson
Pearson	Nash
Rawsthorne	Sherwin
Leach	Yates

The program for the Shanghai eleven while in Hankow included a cricket match between the visitors and a Navy XI, but that event was made impossible because of rain.

Corbett Protests Limit On The Age Of Pugilists

BY JAMES J. CORBETT

Action of the New York State Boxing Commission in refusing licenses to boxers beyond thirty-eight is a peculiar one. By it the commission takes the stand that an athlete is all through at thirty-eight—certainly a most erroneous one.

The welterweight champion of the world is Jack Britton. The records indicate he is thirty-six. Danny Morgan, his piloting boss, coyly intimates that Jack may be thirty-nine. If that's true then Britton, although champion of his class, wouldn't be permitted to do any more battling because the commission reckons he is "too old."

Bob Fitzsimmons was thirty-five when he reached the heavyweight throne. He lost the title at thirty-seven, yet in the year 1900, when he was thirty-eight he polished off Jim Daly Ed Dunhorst, Gus Ruhlin and Tom Sharkey. Two years later, when Fitz was forty, he battled Jim Jeffries for the crown and put up a wonderful fight. Yet the New York commission now takes the attitude that if Fitz were alive and forty now, he would be too old to fight anybody—much less the champion of the world.

Jack Johnson was at least thirty-seven when he fought Jess Willard in Havana. And the records show that Johnson put up a great fight for at least twenty-three rounds, which is a distance further than the bulk of youngsters legalised by the commission can travel now.

NO REAL ATHLETIC AGE

There's no real athletic age—yet the commission tries to take upon itself the power of establishing one. If the thirty-eight-year rule was general, then Wagner, Lajoie, Plank, Wallace and many other truly greats of baseball would have been forced out of the game while still among the starriest of stars. If thirty-eight was the limit then Stanislaus Zbyszko, regarded as the king-pin wrestler, wouldn't be permitted to go on the mat and some of the golfing champions would have to linger around their firesides instead of winning trophies on the links.

If thirty-eight was to be the limit, then such men as Ad Wolgast and a host of others who were burned out in their early twenties would still be eligible to mingle in ring melees.

SOME ULTERIOR MOTIVE

There was some ulterior motive in the commission fixing the limit at thirty-eight. Perhaps it's prompted by the fact that Jack Johnson and Jess Willard both want to fight in the Empire State again.

Johnson's application was ready. The commission perhaps found itself in an embarrassing position if it were put up to them. So perhaps it saw the way out by making the age limit under the publicly acknowledged age of the former negro champion.

Willard, who now admits he was born in December, 1883, wants another smash at Dempsey. He realises that New York is about the only spot that is likely to stand for it. But if Willard is going to engineer that return clash, he'll have to hurry. He's thirty-seven now—will be thirty-eight in December. After that time, no matter what he thinks about it the commission will decide he's too old to do any further quarreling in the padded arena.

Meanwhile there's quite a bit of strong criticism directed at the commission, which holds to the belief that an athlete is through, completely, wholly through, at thirty-eight.

English Champion May Meet Joie Ray Of Chicago

Albert Hill. INTL.

Albert G. Hill, the sensational one-mile runner of England, who American sporting promoters are trying to encourage to come to the United States to meet Joie Ray, of Chicago, in a special one-mile race. Hill is the mile champion of England, while Ray holds the same honors here. In a recent attempt to lower the world's figures for the one-mile Hill came within an ace of doing so when he covered the eight furlongs in 4 minutes 13 3-5 seconds. The world's record of 4 minutes 12 3-5 seconds is held by Norman Tabar. If the race is arranged there is every reason to believe that the record will be broken.

DESTROYER NINE AND HURON MEET AGAIN THIS AFTERNOON IN SECOND GAME OF SERIES

Fleet Cup May Be At Stake Or Not, But Good Game Is Assured

Shanghai baseball fans may see a baseball game worth while this afternoon if they will hike to the race course diamond, where the Flagship Huron nine is billed to defend its prestige and may be a Fleet Cup against the men of the 26th Destroyer Flotilla division.

The game today and the final one tomorrow are the classics of the Asiatic fleet baseball season. They will see the two best teams of the U. S. N. pitted one against the other, and they will see something more, if they look closely.

The Destroyer men this season have registered 17 straight wins. They have defeated the flagship's nine in four successive games, three at Chefoo and one here on Thursday. They boast that they will take today's and tomorrow's game, and they expect as a reward a gold-lined silver cup, now jealously guarded by the Huron men.

The cup however may not pass with the winning of the present series. Flagship men when asked about it, and the possibility of its being lost to the strong and confident destroyer men, an expressed surprise that it should be mentioned. The games to the Huron men are merely games, but the cup must be a prize of a specially arranged series.

Whichever way it goes however, the games today and tomorrow will be worth watching. The Huron men put up a close and fighting game. The Destroyer men turn out with banners, horns, claxons and cheering sections. Should nothing but the long end of the score go with the wins baseball fans will find the afternoon well spent in watching the games.

Senawang Rubber Estates Holds Its Annual Meeting

Meetings of shareholders of the Senawang Rubber Estates Company were held yesterday at the offices of the Secretaries Messrs. J. A. Wattle and Company, 24A Kiangse Road. Mr. E. T. Byrne presided and directors present were Messrs. A. Craddock and A. F. Welch with Mr. C. J. L. Stewart, representing the Secretaries and General Managers.

THE ADDRESSES

The addresses given at the preliminary and at the subsequent meeting were as follows.

Gentlemen.—This is a formal meeting which it is necessary to hold under the Hongkong Ordinance.

As stated in the report, pending the preparation of the final accounts of the old company, it is impossible yet to set out an accurate statement of the assets and liabilities taken over, particulars of any assets realised and liabilities discharged in the straits have not yet been received, and as this meeting must be held within three months from the date on which the company was empowered to commence business, any statement could not be compiled with accuracy.

A list of shareholders of this company is placed on the table for your inspection.

This, gentlemen, is all I have to say with reference to the statutory report, but before asking you to pass the report I shall be glad to answer any questions you may wish to ask.

Immediately after this meeting there will be an ordinary general meeting.

There being no questions, it is proposed by myself and seconded by Mr. Craddock: "That the Statutory Report as presented be passed."

SECOND ADDRESS

The Chairman's speech for the Annual General Meeting was as follows:

Gentlemen.—It is necessary to hold an ordinary general meeting of shareholders during this year, and under the circumstances your directors thought it advisable to avail themselves of this gathering to do so, and to give you any information that may be of interest to you.

Almost half of the tappable trees on the estates are being rested, and when the time comes to again bring them under the knife, it will I am sure be found that the trees have derived great benefit by being kept out of the tapping round for some length of time.

You were told in the last annual report of the old company that 25,984 trees had been thinned out, the visiting agent in his report dated August 2 last, states that the continued improved spread of foliage in the fields dealt with last year is most noticeable, and satisfactory and cannot but result in much gain with the bark renewal.

Remarking on the immature area—Field 30 211 acres—the visiting agent states, a very steady rate of growth is evident and though the trees will always be irregular from their past history the area will represent a valuable addition to the potentialities of the estate in another year or two.

He also states that he is quite pleased with the growth in the replanted areas, all show a very fair stand of even plants with healthy foliage.

With a view to the reduction of expenditure several of the fields in the mature areas have been allowed to go into grass, care being taken to prevent the growth of lallang. Field 29 consisting of 84 acres in the immature area has not been weeded for some time, owing to shortage of funds.

The cost of weeding for the month of July was 97 cents per acre. The estate is free from any serious diseases or pests.

The estate manager Mr. Ryves has shown evidence of keenness in supervision and of efficient management, and is obtaining the best results possible for the expenditure entailed.

As you are aware your directors with your consent are about to issue T[illegible].00,000 of 12% cumulative preference shares with a view to obtaining further funds as the subscription to the new ordinary shares, was not enough to clear the company of its liabilities, and it is hoped that the company's shareholders will do their utmost to subscribe as much as possible to this new issue, so that this old and valuable estate will be kept going. The guarantors of the company's overdraft with the bank, who hold amongst them nearly 90,000 ordinary shares, have promised to take up a good portion of the issue of preference shares and I trust that with their and your help, anxiety with regard to the means of carrying on the work of the estate will be done away with.

It is proposed that January 31 of each year shall be the end of the financial year of the company, therefore on that date next year accounts for the seven months, from June 30 last, will be presented to you.

This is all I have to say, Gentlemen, but I shall be pleased to answer any questions.

AT THE OLYMPIC

One of the big current successes in the moving picture world is the Metro production 'Held in Trust' with May Allison as star which is running through the week-end at the Olympic Theater. This is an exceptionally pretentious offering in seven parts and the quality of novelty of the plot is such that interest is kept at high tension throughout the length of the picture.

The story opens with a criminal enterprise of three men who substitute a girl for a dying woman in an effort to obtain a vast inheritance. From this beginning the story is unfolded in completely realistic manner.

tenance funds as in the judgment of the Board might be required until the college should become permanently established and its future be assured.

TO GIVE BEST POSSIBLE

The purpose of the China Medical Board in entering into this contract was to develop in China a medical school and hospital of a standard comparable with that of the leading institutions known to Western civilisation. In this center it was proposed to offer to the Chinese people facilities for acquiring a thorough knowledge of and training in Western scientific medicine.

While it was intended that the college should lay emphasis upon the training of promising men and women for positions as teachers and investigators, it was of course realised that many of its graduates would enter the service of the community as well equipped physicians and surgeons.

It was also a part of the plan to provide short courses for medical missionaries and Chinese doctors throughout the Chinese Republic that they might be enabled to keep up with the rapid strides made by modern medicine and helped to make of the greatest service the many useful medical enterprises which they were carrying on.

But above all it was hoped that this new medical center might so commend itself to the Chinese people that it would stimulate them to develop similar institutions in various parts of China. For the China Medical Board recognised from the outset that only the Chinese nation itself could cope with a task so colossal as the establishment of modern scientific medical education throughout the Republic and that all Western civilisation could do would be to point the way.

OFFERS FULL COURSE

There have been purchased for the Peking Union Medical College considerable areas of land and fourteen main buildings and fifty-five residences and auxiliary structures have been built or remodelled, all of which are complete and ready for occupancy. The college is now offering to both men and women students the regular medical course with its practice work in dispensary and hospital, and a pre-medical course as well. It is also conducting a training school for nurses.

As regards graduate instruction, it is intended that in certain subjects, where the need is great, short courses such as are now being given to medical missionaries and Chinese practitioners will be provided. It is believed, however, that a more valuable service will be rendered by affording opportunities for more prolonged and thorough training of those suitably qualified by receiving them, in necessarily limited numbers, for a stay of months or even a year as volunteer assistants or special workers in the various departments, whereby they become for the time being a part of the organisation.

While the primary function of the college, as of every medical school, is educational, opportunities have been provided in its laboratories and the hospital for the prosecution of research in the fundamental medical sciences and the clinical subjects. A medical school imbued with the scientific spirit and prepared not only to impart but also to advance knowledge is capable of rendering an inestimable service to China in the influence which it may exert upon the standards and the methods of medical education, in the training of teachers and leaders in the profession and in contributing to the solution of the many problems of disease in this country.

STIMULATE RESEARCH

Abundant experience has demonstrated that teachers gifted with the inclination and capacity for productive investigation are able to combine with their duties as teachers the prosecution and the stimulation of research and to gather about them advanced students and special workers whose contributions extend the reputation of teacher, department and school.

A grateful service which the college will be glad incidentally to render to the community through the hospital and dispensary, is the alleviation of suffering. But the number thus reached will of necessity be relatively small for it must be borne in mind that the hospital is primarily a teaching institution, which while affording the best care for patients, exists, first of all, for instruction and research. Moreover, while the college has not been established to serve the foreign community it will do all possible, within the limits of its primary purpose, to receive serious cases in the hospital, assist private physicians in diagnosis and enter into consultations. Obviously, however, the medical staff cannot, in justice to its first duty of teaching and research, be expected, except in rare and critical cases, to make calls upon patients in Peking or to undertake journeys to distant points. But we are happy in the belief that other hospital facilities now available in Peking and an increasing number of well trained medical men will be able to give adequate care to foreign as well as Chinese patients.

REASON FOR COST

Toward the realisation of the purpose which has animated it from the outset, the China Medical Board has spent in developing the Peking Union Medical College well nigh twice the sum which the present physical plant and equipment would have cost before the war. Several factors combined to bring about this result. Just as the building program was well under way the rate of exchange doubled, which item alone increased the cost of the plant by nearly two millions of dollars gold. Moreover, as a result of the war, freight rates rose so rapidly and the delays in shipping were so great that very considerable extra cost was thereby involved. Then, too, the fact that the China Medical Board had had no previous experience in building in the Orient doubtless somewhat increased the total outlay. Probably a fair valuation of the physical properties of the college today, including the land, would approach five millions of dollars gold.

In drawing plans for the medical buildings and hospital, it has been necessary to follow Western design and arrangement in the interior of the buildings in order to meet the requirements of modern scientific medical practice. At the same time we have deliberately sought in so far as possible, although at no little additional cost to combine with utility of interior the beauty in line and decoration of the Chinese exterior, particularly as regards height, roof structure and ornamentation. This we have done in order that the Chinese people for whose use these buildings have been constructed may feel at home in them and be drawn into closest sympathy and co-operation with the work which they house, and also as a sincere expression of our appreciation of the best in Chinese architecture. That we have been successful to some degree in stirring the interest and appreciation of the Chinese is evidenced by the following excerpt from an article by Sam Dean, entitled "Singing Craftsmen of Peking," which appeared in the August issue of Asia:

INSPIRATION TO BUILDERS

"Master Chinese craftsmen have told me, in expressing their opinion of the Rockefeller Hospital at Peking, that no other building erected in China in the past century was so profound an inspiration to Chinese artisans. They did not like the window casings, they felt the lack of the massive, deep-shadowed effect that columns would have produced, and they thought the unsupported walls too frail for the roof, but, because the building was one in which the soul of a people could express itself, they traveled long distances for the privilege of working on it, even in the humblest capacity. Men who were master stone carvers in their own districts were willing to work as coolies, if only they might say they had been employed in the construction of this building. Farmers from the western hills, descendants of the architects that built the Peking palaces, were content to haul dirt on wheelbarrows if they too might have some share in this masterpiece. I once met an old artist, a painter of temples from his boyhood, who had painted certain of the figures near the roof of the hospital. From the ground they were barely visible, but he had put the training of a lifetime and all his soul into the work. 'It is,' he said, 'my monument.'"

Surely it is not too much to hope that the same fidelity and devotion to their task which characterised some of the artisans who built these buildings, may be inspired by the buildings in the students who use them.

TAKES MIND AND HEART

But we have realised that stone and wood, however, cunningly and skilfully fashioned and equipment however complete cannot make a medical school; that that result is dependent on the quality of mind and heart which the faculty brings to bear on its work. Hence the United States, Great Britain, Canada, as well as China, have been drawn upon in making up our family, which is composed of men preeminently fitted for their work and entering into it in a fine spirit of loyalty and enthusiasm.

Particularly gratifying is it to be able to bear testimony to the excellent work and promising character of a number of the young Chinese members of the staff, whose development we are following with the greatest satisfaction.

We have realised, too, that although we might give to the Chinese medical students who pass through the college training as good as is to be had anywhere, that alone would fall far short of equipping them for their life work as the highest type of medical practitioner should be equipped. For only as their professional skill goes hand in hand with high character, only as they are inspired with the spirit of service and of sacrifice referred to in the message from my father, will our graduates be of most value to their fellowmen and to their country.

MUST BE IDEALISTIC

And it is because we believe that the highest character is built upon the deepest spiritual foundations alone that we have sought to bring, together a medical faculty not only with the best scientific equipment but possessed at the same time of the finest idealism. In other words, it is the desire of the Peking Union Medical College to offer to the people of China the best that is known to Western civilisation not only in medical science but in mental development and spiritual culture. While, therefore, we shall willingly minister to the bodily needs of those who come within our doors seeking physical aid only, while we shall gladly afford training for the minds of those who come for that purpose, and while it is our profound conviction that the best in any man can only be realised as his nature becomes receptive to the highest spiritual influences, at the same time it is not our purpose to force upon any one that which he does not wish, nor shall we refrain from serving those who come to us for aid along any one of these three lines of human betterment because he does not wish help along all three.

With the Medical Missionary Boards which have been most zealous in the development of medical missions, and with the work which they have undertaken, the Peking Union Medical College wishes at all times to be in most cordial co-operation. We are here to supplement, not to supplant, what they are doing, to aid not to impede them in their efforts. In fullest sympathy with the missionary spirit and purpose, we are desirous of furthering it as completely as may be consistent with the maintenance of the highest scientific standards in the medical school and the best service in the hospital. We would ever show respect to the genuine spiritual aspirations evidenced in service and sacrifice, of those who come within our doors, whatever their views, for after all it is not a fact that the final test of true religion is the translation of that religion into the highest type of life.

IDEALS TAKE TIME

Rome was not built in a day, nor can the ideals which animated the founders of the new Peking Union Medical College be realised in a day, or a year or a decade. A mushroom growth is short lived. The most stable and enduring structure is that which is built on deep and broad foundations. This enterprise was entered upon, as has already been pointed out, only after years of careful study and deliberation. The purpose of those who are back of it has never weakened or changed. The one danger to be carefully avoided is the temptation to too rapid growth and a superficial development. Gradual growth alone gives assurance of stability and permanence. A frank recognition of this danger at the outset and concerted action on the part of the trustees and faculty in standing resolutely against it will insure its avoidance.

Patience will be needed on the part of the faculty, students and the public in the development of this institution. Certain departments may not be fully organised or completely equipped for some time to come and a few may not even be started until later. We shall endeavor, however, to maintain a high standard for those departments which have been established. So long, therefore, as all those related to the enterprise are working together in a spirit of sympathetic co-operation toward the attainment of the ultimate ideals which we have set before us from the outset, each step taken will be a step of real progress in reaching the final goal.

In order that one of the foremost objects of the China Medical Board in building up the Peking Union Medical College may be attained, namely, that the college may serve to stimulate the development by the Chinese people of similar institutions, it is essential that the current cost of operating should always be kept on a conservative level. If a policy other than this is followed and a school set up here more expensive to maintain than comparable institutions in America and Europe, not only will a disservice have been rendered to the cause of medical education and hospital development throughout the world, but the Chinese people will not be so ready to undertake the creation and maintenance of similar institutions in other parts of the Chinese Republic.

WANT CHINA TO AID

Clearly, whatever Western medical science may have to offer China will be of little avail to the Chinese people until it is taken over by them and become a part of the national life. So we must look forward to the day when most, if not all, of the positions on the faculty of the Peking Union Medical College will be held by Chinese; when the Board of Trustees, while embracing appointees of those bodies which founded the institution, as well as other representatives of Western civilisation in China, will include leading Chinese; and when such current support as the institution may need beyond that derived from tuition fees, and such endowment as may be set aside by its founders, shall be derived from Chinese gifts and governmental subsidies as is the case with medical institutions of similar rank in other countries of the world.

Let us then go forward with one accord towards the attainment of this objective which will make permanent the establishment on Chinese soil of the best in scientific medicine that the world can offer.

Recently, when the pneumonia plague appeared in Shansi, the Minister of the Interior assigned certain physicians, among them Dr. Yu Shu-fen, to combat it. Dr. Yu succeeded to the disease, and realising that he could not recover, dictated a farewell message in which this remarkable paragraph occurs:

DR. YU'S EPITAPH

"With my enthusiasm for plague prevention I overstepped the bounds of convention and in my constant contact with the plague accidentally contracted the disease. I am dying for the people. I have no complaint."

Just a few days before his death Dr. Yu had written in the guest book of Dr. F. F. Tucker of Tehchow:

"I came to fight the plague and to put into practice God's love for man."

When the Peking Union Medical College faculty is manned with Chinese professors of Dr. Yu's type, bringing to bear upon the students of the college the influence of such lives, and when men of that calibre are each year being graduated from the college to spread throughout this great land the healing of the body and the inspiration of the soul of the Chinese people, the spirit of service and of sacrifice, in which this institution was conceived, will have been immortalised and one of the chief purposes for which the college founded will have been realised.

CASTORIA
for Infants and Children.

The Effects of Opiates.

THAT INFANTS are peculiarly susceptible to opium and its various preparations, all of which are narcotics, is well known. Even in the smallest doses, if continued, these opiates cause changes in the functions and growth of the cells, which are likely to become permanent, causing imbecility, mental perversion, a craving for alcohol or narcotics in later life. Nervous diseases, such as intractable nervous dyspepsia and lack of staying power, are a result of dosing with opiates or narcotics to keep children quiet in their infancy. The rule among physicians is that children should never receive opiates in the smallest doses for more than a day at a time, and only then if unavoidable.

The administration of Anodynes, Drops, Cordials, Soothing Syrups and other narcotics to children by any but a physician cannot be too strongly decried, and the druggist should not be a party to it. Children who are ill need the attention of a physician, and it is nothing less than a crime to dose them wilfully with narcotics. Castoria contains no narcotics if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

EDWIN F PARDEE, M. D., New York City.

"I have used your Castoria in my own household with good results, and have advised several patients to use it for its mild, laxative effect and freedom from harm."
EDWARD PARDEE, M. D., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Your Castoria is a meritorious household remedy. It is purely vegetable and acts as a mild cathartic. Above all, it does no harm, which is more than can be said of the great majority of children's remedies."
VICTOR H. COFFMAN, M. D., Omaha, Neb.

NEW GOVERNOR OF ANHWEI HAS TAKEN OVER SEAL

(China Press Correspondence)

Anking, An., Sept. 20.—There is a great deal of dissatisfaction in Anking at the appointment of the new Civil Governor of Anhwei, Mr. Li Chao-chen. According to reliable information from various Chinese, it is mainly because he is too old for the job. They make quite a point of saying that a man of over seventy isn't wanted here. Other Chinese maintain that he is an Anfuite.

The students planned an active demonstration against him when he was arriving one day last week, gathering in large numbers at the landing, and there were many rumors around that if he tried to land from the steamer there would be another riot similar to the one a few months ago, when several students were hurt.

However Mr. Li evidently had advance notice of the reception awaiting him, and fooled them.

He failed to arrive on the regular steamer, but instead came on a military launch, with a considerable personal body guard, landed quietly a short distance below the city, and came in through the small South Gate, and was in his yamen before the news reached the Reception Committee at the other gate.

Since then there have been no active troubles until today, when the students, joined by most of the shopkeepers have gone on strike, declaring they will stay out till he leaves.

The shop strike is only a partial one, most of the shops being ostensibly shut as to front doors, but with business as usual by the well-known back-door method.

SAD TIME FOR SPECULATORS IS PROPHECY

According to the September issue of Money and Trade, published monthly by the Shanghai Commercial and Savings Bank, the stagnancy of silver in Shanghai is partly due to the large output of silver coinage by the Hangchow mint at the rate of from $160,000 to $240,000 daily. The same organ contains an article on the future of the exchanges and trust companies. The opinion is expressed that when the export trade is revived with consequent demand for the use of silver and when cash settlements will be required for the New Year reckoning, the credit extended to exchanges etc., will be withdrawn and then there will be a rush in the sale of exchange shares and speculators will come to grief.

The drawing shall be taken place on March 15 and September 15 of every year, supervised by representatives from the Ministry of Communications.

Art. 7. Subscriptions shall be closed at the end of September, the tenth year of Chinese Republic. The Week's Market Reports

In the weekly report on the Shanghai Piece Goods Trade, Messrs. Noel Murray and Co., Ltd., write as follows:

Cotton:—The market in New York has remained fairly steady during the week and yesterday's prices shew little change on the last, viz: 20.20 cents for Spot, 20.03, 19.95 and 19.75 cents for December, March and May respectively. In Liverpool yesterday Spot Good Middlings were quoted 14.06d., October 13.88d and January cotton 13.46d. Bengals are a penny cheaper at 8.40d. and Egyptians are 1½d., down at 22d. In Bombay F. G. Bengals are quoted at Rs. 353, Fine Oomras Rs. 513 and F. G. Broach Rs. 503. These prices are a little easier, but speculation is still being indulged in, in the case of cotton and almost everything else.

Home Markets: — Hornby's 8¼-lbs. Shirtings have advanced 1/- per piece to 19 - and Calverts 10 lbs. are now quoted 28 6, which is an increase in price of 4 6 since the 3rd inst. and 7/6 since August 22. Many replies to offers made from here are refusals and advances of 2/- to 4 - a piece, so that in spite of more favorable exchange that is available, business is not getting through. The American market and this have drifted far apart and nothing has been consummated for some time.

Local Market:—Fierce fighting is reported to have been in progress in and around Ichang and the results appear to have been indecisive so far, but as foreign shipping interests are suffering to a heavy extent, it is likely that diplomatic complications may arise. In spite of these disturbances, the conditions of trade here appear to be quite healthy and another boosting up of exchange to beyond the 4/- level has given the dealers heart and they are more or less eager buyers deterred, however, by the advance in prices at the places of production. One effect of the rise in exchange is to bring Japan within the range of local prices and Yarn from the Osaka Mills may soon be reappearing on this market. Since the holiday last week, fine weather has been enjoyed and a good clearance of cargo has been in progress.

Financial:—The local stock of Sycee and Bars has shrunk to Tls. 22,739,000 and the supply of dollars is unchanged at $25,500,000. The holdings of the native banks are Tls. 7,070,000 and $13,370,000.

Yarn:—600 bales of Indian spinnings have changed hands at advancing rates and the local mills have sold 1,900 bales of their product as well as 4,800 bales to the retail shops. Deliveries of yarn and cloth from the factories have been on a satisfactory scale.

Woosung:—There are now two Cotton Mills on the Northern Bank of the Woosung Creek, The Da-Chun Wha, of 34,000 Spindles and the Wha Foom of 15,000 Spindles and 300 Looms. The latter is to hold its opening ceremony in a few days' time; already its ticket, "Castle," has appeared in our list of Yarn sales.

Auctions:—After a fortnight's rest, the market re-opened with a great amount of zest; 36,660 pieces were sold and there was good competition all through. The Greys had varied experiences but ended up today rather weakly; also the Korean demand for White Shirtings appears to have been satisfied for the time being, and that market is affected by the rise in exchange. Bleached T-Cloths and Jeans were steady. Velvets were stronger. The best feature was Fast Black Italians, and a bigger dose was taken at strong prices. Fancies were quite firm but Venetians were inclined to sag.

ROSENFELD REPORT

Messrs. A. B. Rosenfeld and Son state as follows in their cotton market report of today:

China Cotton:—Throughout the week the market displayed a steady tendency with a net advance of Tls. 0.50 to 1.00 during the early part of the week. At the close, however, the trend was slightly on the easy side.

As to the crop outlook, evidence has been accumulating that the favorable weather which has prevailed throughout the Belt during the past week has been instrumental in bringing about a marked improvement in its condition, especially for the late planted crops. During the latter end of the week good progress has been made with picking, and if the present favorable weather continues for another fortnight it will bring out a fair amount of cotton. For the present the movement continues slow, and we do not look for heavy receipts before the first week in October.

Yarn:—Prices in the yarn market during the past week have shown little change and trading continued moderately active. Some 3,000 to 4,000 bales of various counts and chops of local products have been bought up by Canton, Swatow, Kiangse and Newchwang dealers. General conditions in the interior marts are healthy, considering that they are practically bare of stocks.

SPUNT & COMPANY

In their cotton market report of today Messrs. J. Spunt and Company state:

China Cotton:—Our market during the past week evinced a little activity, in that Spinners showed a little more interest than has been the case for some time past for the local staple, but actual business done was in such small parcels as to bring about only more of a firmer effect on the prices ruling for the time being.

However, from reports to hand, it is now confidently expected that the new season crop will turn out to be no more than 40 percent of normal, which, coupled with the rising tendency in Mid-Americans and Indians and notwithstanding the rise in Silver, tend to substantiate the indications for the near future to firmer and eventually rising markets, particularly as the time approaches for replenishment of stocks of the raw material on the part of most of the local Mills whose provisions will carry them for not longer than two to three months more. Tone of the market, firm.

The Chinese Political Stage

BY JOSEF W. HALL

ON with the new!

The Peking stage is all set, not for a new act, but for new actors. It has become almost an unwritten law—or rather, we might say, a gentleman's agreement between the various political cliques—that no set of officials is to maintain office for more than one year, that period of time being regarded as liberally sufficient for the acquisition of goodly private fortune. As a matter of fact, were it not for the pressure of the "outs," who desire their turn, the "ins" still would be compelled to retire after ten or twelve months, as any one set of officials appear to come to the end of their ingenuity in exploiting their offices in about that length of time. The old act can be played endlessly, provided there be frequent change of actors.

For each new player brings with him a new atmosphere, a variation in manner, and a distinct support. The present administration is nearing its retirement chiefly because the Chinese Banking Consortium, offended at the ousting of Yeh Kung-cho from the Ministry of Communications last spring, has been adamant in its refusal to make loans. The administration must have loans or cease to carry on. These loans can come only through the acquiescence of the Chinese Banking Group. Therefore, the present incumbents of office must retire in favor of others who will have the goodwill of the Chinese bankers.

Chinese politics, always a farce, becomes at times so pitiful as to be tragic. Yet the humorous element is never lacking. The Peking constabulary have not been paid for two months. Once boasted of as the livest police force in China, their failure to receive the remuneration providing their hand-to-mouth existence is causing a manifest lassitude in the prosecution of their duties. The story is going the rounds that Police Commissioner Yin made the mistake of detailing a squad to break up a mah jongg gambling party which happened to contain a consequential member of the Chinese banking community. Since that moment the police chief has been unable to float the customary monthly loans to pay the salaries of his men. It is to be surmised that the personnel of the Police Commissionership as well as of the Cabinet will require change.

Minister of Foreign Affairs Yen has not yet been provided his budget of $800,000, required for the expenses of the delegation to the Washington Conference. He is in the very embarrassing position of having contracted steamship accommodations and other obligations for which he has not funds to pay. Of course, at the last minute, after the good Minister and his associates who are laboring so hard to keep up a "front" before the world have been worried to the point of desperation, the funds somehow will be provided. Not even the Super-Tuchuns are prepared so to humble China in the dust as to allow that China's representation end in fiasco through lack of money to get the delegates away from home.

The Japanese apparently mean business in the Dairen Conference, and the Russians will make many concessions to reach a settlement. There seems to be no reason why the governments of Tokio and Chita should not reach a modus vivendi within the course of the next few days. A resumption of friendly relations will bring in its course rapid economic rehabilitation for Siberian Russia.

China, as she was well warned, stands to be the loser. When too late, as prophesied, her officials begin to realise their mistake in rebuffing Russia's friendly overtures and driving her into the arms of Japan. Now the Chinese accuse the Russians of perfidy. An exclamation mark is the only comment that we can think of. The Chinese say they will not allow Russo-Japanese traffic on the Chinese Eastern R. R. and Amur and Sungari Rivers if the Chita-Japanese treaty proves not to their liking. "Allow" is a big word to use. Another exclamation mark!

There is some talk of China being invited to participate in the Dairen Conference, making it a tri-partite affair. On the surface such an eventuation appears desirable in the interests of permanent peace and all-round justice. One is led to believe, however, that a good deal of the talk is the propaganda of insincere Peking officialdom, which, in a pet, has threatened to withdraw the courteous (including breaking of despatch cases) treatment accorded Chita's resident in Peking, Mr. Agareff.

The Lushan Conference mystery may be explained in this wise: At the outbreak of the Wuhan disturbance, General Wu Pei-fu let it be known that he still regarded the National People's Assembly, proposed by him following his defeat of the Anfus one year ago, as the solution of the reunification problem. He stated to a representative of THE CHINA PRESS that the strife in the Central Yangtsze must cause a postponement of the assembly, which the General had intended to call this autumn. It could not, he said, prevent the ultimate carrying out of the plan.

Enemies of the convention idea, who had thought it safely buried, were alarmed at its resurrection by General Wu. The most workable plan to their hand for again putting the scheme under the ground was to cause the call to be sent out prematurely. General Chang Shao-tseng, an associate and in a sense a subordinate of General Wu, has been known to subscribe to Wu's political theories, sent out such a premature call—under what influences is unrevealed. We have no reason to doubt General Chang's sincerity in the matter.

The result is, however, to place Wu in the dilemma of either proceeding with the convention at this time—although prematureness almost certainly dooms it to failure—or appearing before the Chinese people as the renouncer of his own pet scheme. Wu appears to have first chosen the latter and now to be turning to the former horn.

If this be the explanation it serves to illustrate how hard it is for a leader in China to do anything for his country. Not only do the tactics of his political enemies force him into the traditional paths of Tuchunism, but the very attitude of the common people who psychologically mistrust any leader and regard power as synonymous with corruptness bears in the same direction. After all, the Tuchun is the product of his people.

The present popular campaign of illwill and suspicion toward Wu Pei-fu is more than anything calculated to make a "Tuchun" of a man who probably desired to be something different.

Always The Politeness

So a Japanese company has been floated to lay out our Japanese gardens in true Japanese style, says a writer in the London Daily Express. Given a free hand, unguided by British taste, it may spare us such a shock as once befell a well-known hostess, who was entertaining a distinguished Japanese visitor to England at her country house.

Without saying what lay in store for her guest, the lady conducted him to her "Japanese garden." She expected to see a faraway look come into his tear-filled eyes as the prospect wafted him back to his distant and beloved home. Instead, he beamed on her through his gold-rimmed spectacles, and bowing with true Oriental politeness, exclaimed: "Beautiful! We have nothing like this in Japan."

Prize Fighter Is A Freak, Says Famous Physician

BY WOODS HUTCHINSON

(Eminent Physician Whose Discourses on Health and Hygiene Have Been Followed with General Interest)

Prize fighters are freaks. They're inferior men. That's it in a nutshell—inferior men. Every prize fighter I've ever examined—and I've examined more than a few—has had a consumptive chest. None of them are really strong men; none of them have any endurance to speak of. And their mentality is very, very low.

A few years ago, in California, I had a number of well-known ring fighters under observation. It came about this way.

Once upon a time a wise old cockatoo stated that the flat chest was the consumptive chest. Very good. Since he made that statement medical men and others seemed called upon to reiterate it.

I decided to investigate for myself.

In those days many fighters were coming to California. It was boomtime for fighting there. I met the original Jack Dempsey—the Dempsey whose name the present-day pugilist is wearing—and examined him. Then there was Joe Walcott and Willie Meehan, and Bombardier Wells.

I found that these men not only had tubercular chests—but they also had tuberculosis!

What sort of chests had they?

Round chests! The sort of chest we had been told were the healthy, strong man's chest.

Do you know what sort of a chest a baby has? No?

Well, it's a round chest—exactly the same type of chest that your prize fighter has. However, the baby doesn't keep that chest longer than he has to—nature has given him more sense. Little by little his chest flattens out, and as he grows older, if he is healthy, it broadens, too.

To prove that my findings were average, and therefore to be accepted as true, I may say that I examined 2,500 men—many of them soldiers.

That former Jack Dempsey died of consumption, as you know. So did Peter Jackson, a crack fighter of twenty years ago. And though I can't give you the names of all that I looked up—I went right into their family history—I can state that at least one-third of all the fighters of bygone days whose records I investigated had died of tuberculosis.

The percentage among average citizens is about eleven to one. Quite a difference, isn't there?

And speaking of averages. The ordinary man lives to something over fifty-three years, while the prize fighter's life is limited, on the average, to slightly more than thirty-six.

Of course, there are exceptions. Corbett, for instance. And old John L. But the exceptions just mean that men like Corbett and John L. were unusual men.

You know in the old days, when they took measurements of chests in order to determine an average, they took their measurements from skeletons. Can you imagine anything more absurd? You'd see my point more clearly if you knew how those skeletons were set up.

FLAT CHEST IS HEALTHY

The man that fixed them doesn't know how the chest bones go, so he rigs them up so that they're about perpendicular to the spinal column. So that when they come to measure the skeleton they find that the man whom the skeleton had once been had had a very round chest. Apparently. But the chances are that the man had had a flat chest, which is a sign of true health.

Prize fighters are freaks, but I don't want you to understand that I think they're roughnecks. They're not. Many people have called them vicious. But that's absurd. The average prize fighter is nothing but a good-natured, harmless child. He is usually kind-hearted and very good-natured.

But they are freaks.

They don't live long. A fighter's life, especially when you eliminate the childhood part of it, is terribly short. He goes up like a flash to his greatest success, and like a flash he comes down.

The wise man is the man who stops when he's at his best.

But the unfortunate part of it is that they don't stop. They're freaks, but they don't realise it.

ROUGHENCK V RINGFIGHTER

Since the game began, every prize fighter has believed that he was the exception—that he would live long—that the time of his downfall would never come—and that when he got too old to fight, and his strength and agility began to slip from him, he'd know enough to stop. But they seldom stop in time? Now and again you find a man who's recognised his limitations and has quit the game before the game has trapped him—but they're few and far between.

Now there are two things which the prize fighter has not—and one thing which he has.

He has little balance. His legs are undeveloped, and when he stands it as if he were on a pivot. He can fall with all his force once or twice, smashing out his fist with terrific power. But then all he can do is stand still and get pounded. His punch is unbalanced, unnatural and unhealthy. Your ring fighter is not a barroom fighter, contrary to widespread popular opinion. If he attempted to scrap with a real roughneck he would be beaten up, for he can't handle himself for brutal stuff.

If his punch misses, he has lost a tremendous amount of energy, for he has been all keyed up to deliver that punch the moment the opportunity presented itself. His very state of being keyed up has cost him a lot of energy, for his muscles have been taut and ready. Missing, he is like the bee that dies after he has stung.

FEELS NO PAIN

In the second place, he has no nerves. Pain is a thing unknown to him. Never in my life have I seen pain show itself on a prize fighter's face. And I know when a man is in pain. I've seen the sign many times.

Therefore, it's absurd to talk of brutality in the ring. You can't say a man has been treated brutally if he doesn't feel the blows!

On the other hand, though, it is also absurd to speak of prize fighting as requiring courage and manliness. It most certainly does not.

Have you ever tried to kill an eel? Have you ever tried to kill one by walloping him on the head? Yes? What impression did you make on the eel? None.

That's exactly the impression you could make on a prize fighter by hitting him on the head. He scarcely feels it. The place for the knockout is the jawbone—or the solar plexus. At the point of connection between the jawbone and the skull the bone is thickest and most brittle. There is more line there and no spongy tissue. A stiff wallop on the point of the jaw, or on the side of the jawbone, and the man is likely to go down.

Well, that completes the essential things which the prize fighter has not. There is one thing which he has.

"Quickness."

He has quickness of response. He must be able to deliver a blow like lighting—so fast that it cannot be timed. In fact, he delivers the blow so fast that he does not himself realise that he is doing it. When he is hit, he responds in a flash; but it is on account of a strange reflex. The message is not transmitted to the brain, but merely to the spine, and the answer comes back in incredibly short time.

It would produce more result if you kicked a boxer in the shins than if you hit him on the head.

Hard head? It seems that it must be almost solid!

And in terms of intelligence, the average fighter is solid headed. He has the mentality of a twelve-year-old—Oh, sometimes of a ten-year-old, and I have met fighters who didn't think higher than an eight-year-old boy.

They're freaks, as I said before. They go up—and down. Two years in a fighter's life is as long as twenty in the ordinary man's. That's why the man of today is forgotten tomorrow.

Marry A Man Who Has Sisters

(From London Daily Mail)

In an attempt to discover the reason why several of my men acquaintances are dissatisfied with married life, I have found that most of the discontented husbands have no sisters.

A boy who is brought up in a daughterless household has little opportunity in his most impressionable years of learning a few cardinal truths about the opposite sex from personal experience.

When he reaches manhood women are to him as charming enigmas, and when he falls in love he begins to realise his stupendous ignorance of feminine human nature. Sisters, especially if they are our seniors, are more or less responsible for our success or failure in marriage.

During the constant association on the boy and his sister in childhood and youth he begins to learn a few lessons in the conduct of the conflict of the sexes. This conflict by no means precludes a real affection between brother and sister.

The differences that arise are of a similar character to the tiffs of matrimony, and often spring from the same source. Most girls are wont to resent that kind of preferential treatment that parents often exercise in regard to sons.

So many things are lawful and right for the boy which are forbidden to the girl. A girl is never allowed to forget the fact that she is a girl, and the seeds of rebellion against man are often sown in the nursery. Women exist who regret throughout life that they were born women. The regret often merges into bitterness of childhood.

This female jealousy of the male may be noted in most families of boys and girls. Unconsciously the sister's behavior is often actuated by sex antagonism, which is shown in the tendency to tease, and, in the case of an older sister, to bully her brother.

Many boys have their favorite sister, and this is a frequent cause of jealousy on the part of those sisters who are not preferred as companions.

The young man without sisters often begins the rudimentary study of women when he begins wooing. He enters upon the adventure full of dreams and fantasies. Never having lived day by day with ordinary very human sisters, he is apt to accept the "best behavior" mood of young woman as a constant sign, whereas he should know that women can be quite as impatient, irascible, unreasonable and inscrutable as tender, sympathetic, patient and unselfish.

Sisters are a very useful and healthy discipline in a boy's life. Many men are strongly influenced in their choice of a wife through the insight into femininity gained from sisters.

In some instances of close attachment of brother and sister, the young man may seek instinctively a girl resembling his sister in character. On the contrary, the example of the sister may act as a warning in the selection of a life partner.

Hypnosis Dangerous In Hands Of Layman

Vienna, Aug. 20.—Hypnosis is a dangerous weapon in the hands of a layman, according to Professor Wagner-Jauregg, the noted nerve specialist. A sixteen-year-old girl was recently brought to his clinic suffering from hysteria, accompanied by convulsions and attacks of almost maniacal rage. Investigations showed that the girl had been absolutely healthy and normal two months ago, but had since then repeatedly permitted herself to be hypnotised by an amateur hypnotist.

Professor Wagner-Juaregg reported the case to the police. The girl is the third patient brought to the clinic within nine months suffering from a severe hysterical affliction as a result of frequent hypnosis.

Garrett P. Serviss Writes On Influence Of The Sun

Our Weather Is Dependent On Solar Energy, He Asserts—Spots Are Often Misunderstood

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS
(Famous Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Subjects of Popular Interest)

This earth has revolved in the presence of the sun for some millions of years, and has been inhabited by a race of two-legged featherless creatures possessed of considerable intellectual acuteness for some tens of thousands of years at least, and yet the question is debated whether or no variations in the radiation of the sun are the cause of fluctuations in the intensity of the weather and the seasons on the earth.

The sun is a variable star. That fact has been established beyond all question. The sun is the sole known source of the heat and the other forms of radiation that warm and vivify the earth's surface. That is another well-established fact.

Put these two facts together and how can anyone reach any other conclusion than that the observed variations of the sun's radiant energy are the cause of the meteorological variations experienced on the earth in close synchronism with the solar changes?

YEAR'S WEATHER PROVES IT

The atmospheric vagaries of the present year ought to be conclusive on that point, especially when we know that former similar phenomena also coincided with like conditions manifested in the sun. The difficulty that some seem to find in accepting the view that the sun is sufficiently variable in its outgivings to so seriously change the earth's weather is based on the contradictory conditions that often exist simultaneously in different parts of the same hemisphere. But more allowance should be made for the effects of local and temporary influences, which are often of an exceedingly complicated character.

To account for all the caprices of the atmosphere, lying on the irregular surface of the globe and excited by the varying solar rays, would be about as easy as to foretell every motion of the currents in a vessel of heated water.

A special difficulty in the way of popular acceptance of the theory that the character of the weather on the earth follows periodic changes in the sun is that such changes do not manifest themselves in ways readily recognised by untrained observers. The common idea is that the sun shines with unvarying intensity at all times, seasonal changes being due only to the regularly repeated excursions of the sun, now to one side and now to the other side of the equator.

The latter part of this statement is true, but the variation in the intensity of the seasons cannot be due simply to the change in the declination of the sun. A series of extraordinarily hot Summers or cold Winters must have for cause some corresponding strengthening or weakening of the solar radiation.

SUN SPOTS MISUNDERSTOOD

A common misunderstanding is that the sun spots, which recur in fairly regular periods of about eleven years, shut off a perceptible amount of the sun's light and heat, and thus alter the amount of radiation reaching the earth. But sun spots, though often actually very large, are, after all, mere dots on the vast solar surface, and are evanescent in character, so that their obscuring effect is practically negligible when a long period of abnormal heat or cold is in question.

The true cause of the effect exercised by the sun upon the earth lies much deeper, and is in fact the fundamental, and still mysterious, cause of the sun spots themselves. They are mere incidents of the fluctuations in the sun that induce the effects felt by the earth, and just as a huge cloud may arise in the atmosphere in connection with a storm of moderate power, while a terrific tempest may be accompanied by but little visible vapor, so a great group of sun spots may be associated with a much less notable disturbance of the solar energies than a comparatively insignificant single spot.

Our knowledge of the whole subject is still only fragmentary, and both meteorologists and astronomers have no more important work in hand than that done at the solar observatories.

TEXACO
TEXACO ROOFING
the Asphaltic Roofing
If interested in a practical roofing you should know more about the Texaco kind—it is a durable, economical, proof against every kind of weather and easy to apply.
Texaco Roofing is a composition of asphalt with an all-rag felt base. Use it on any kind of structure you may possess. There are four weights—a weight suited to every requirement from factory to residence.
Texaco Roofing resists the action of chemical fumes, gas and smoke as well as rain, fog, sleet and any other form of moisture. That's why it is so economical to use. Texaco Roofing is fire resisting and, due to a special tempering process, proof against weather change. It will not melt in hot weather nor will extremely low temperatures cause it to crack.
